

Organic tones with pops of color unify the interiors of this rambling estate known as Maple Hill Farm in Redding. According to the designer, Amy Zolin, "Overall, the house reads as a substantial country manor, but it's the contemporary aesthetic that keeps things understated and real." The master bedroom features a high ceiling and architectural windows with custom seating. The dining room is composed of custom oak chevron floors flanked by metal doors, hand-painted walls, and floor-to-ceiling windows. The dining table is solid walnut inlaid with resin and steel. The cozy, airy living room is comfortable, yet effortlessly chic with its textures of mohair, soft wools, and chenille.
