Sage & Ginger chose to make the statement piece for this kitchen a light fixture made of hand-blown sculpted glass crystal clusters.

This bedroom, designed by Clarity Home Interiors, achieved the client's goal of a relaxed feel in a grand space.

Laidback Luxury CLARITY HOME INTERIORS

After renting in Connecticut at the start of the pandemic, the homeowner of this Greenwich property quickly knew the family wanted to call the area home. They settled on this close-to-town house and tasked Clarity Home Interiors with creating a design that was fresh and inviting, while keeping the space functional for their growing family. They also wanted to ensure that though the home is on a grand scale (there are walls of 10-foot windows and doors, along with marble fireplaces) that the interiors offer a relaxed and approachable feel, says Amy Zolin, designer and principal of Clarity. They achieved this throughout the house, including in the primary bedroom. "The bed is a mix of wood and luxurious fabric by Holly Hunt on a stately high headboard with channel back," explains Zolin. "It is complemented by a bench and a pair of swivel chairs. And the soft neutral wood tones make the room feel balanced between comfort and luxury." Custom features are prominent in the room, including the cream and beige-toned linen curtain, stone mantel, and soft wool flatweave rug, which Zolin says, "feels like slippers when your feet hit the ground." Rounding out the room's peaceful vibe is the sitting area which, Zolin says, is reminiscent of a spa lounge with two custom lounge chairs facing the grounds where the children play soccer.
